Birthing DURING COVID-19

Welcoming a new baby into the family is a sacred time. The COVID-19 pandemic will impact how you plan for your birth. The ways your family and community can support you may also be different than they hoped.

IF YOU ARE FEELING NERVOUS ABOUT GIVING BIRTH DURING THE PANDEMIC, YOU ARE NOT ALONE.

- Talk to an Elder, your care providers and your support circle.
- Connect with cultural teachings and take care of your physical, mental, emotional and spiritual health.
- Plan ahead so you have what you need for your best birth and early days.

Preparing For Birth

During your prenatal appointments, talk about the ways your support circle can be included.

You can expect that your care providers will be wearing a mask, eye protection, gloves, and gown.

Learn about the COVID-19 related precautions that are in place. Ask your care provider to help you understand anything that needs to change in relation to where you are giving birth and who can be with you.

Ceremony is still possible with some changes. Talk to your care providers and support circle to plan ahead.

Everyone wants you to have the best birth possible!

You have the right to decide when, where and how you have children, who your care providers will be and to parent the children you have in a healthy environment.

www.indigenousmidwifery.ca

This document provides client-friendly information designed to help you better understand some of the considerations and choices you may face while receiving care from your midwife. It is not intended to replace the informed choice discussions that you and your midwife will have. If you have any questions, concerns or ideas after reading over this document, please share them with your midwife.

This initiative was supported by the Johnson & Johnson Foundation in partnership with the Johnson & Johnson Center for Health Worker Innovation.